Hi Alex,

How are you lately? I wanted to talk to you about my family problems.

I encountered many problems at home. My family are all glued to their phones. They use their phones for checking emails, playing games and shopping online. As a result, we rarely talk to each other. I told my family how I felt and convinced them to stop using their phones all the time. At dinner, we talked to each other more and we now have a closer relationship.

But then I encountered another problem. My sister and I quarreled a lot. We argue because my sister always wanted to watch TV first and she makes fun of me. We also argue about sharing our things. As a result, we stopped getting along and we started to hurt each other physically. To solve this problem, I gave her sorry gifts to show her that I was sorry. Also, I listen to my sister's point of view and try to understand her feelings. We now get along better and we argue less.

I'd like to know if you have any family problems and how you solved them.

Sincerely,

Chris Chan
